

Verónica Fernández Pérez is a Spanish journalist with almost ten years of experience as a translator and proof-reader. She lives in Madrid but, thanks to the ease of present-day digital communications, has worked with interesting people across the globe. Her customers have included individuals and companies in Saudi Arabia, England, France, Italy and Brazil, and she has learnt that while people in diverse locations may differ superficially, on a deeper level, what they all have in common is often more striking. Her main areas of interest are education, children, immigration, foreign affairs, history, languages, detective stories, Islam and ethics. As a professional, she considers herself very thorough. “I do not forget details,” she says. “I am able to focus for long periods and am very dedicated to all my projects. I hate missing a due date but I won’t deliver a work whose result doesn’t satisfy me.” Verónica is currently translating Our Woman in Jamaica into Spanish.